The first part of the research is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is to determine the effect of the independent variable on the dependent variable. The independent variable is the amount of time spent on the task, and the dependent variable is the number of errors made.

The second part of the research is to design the experiment. This involves determining the levels of the independent variable and the order in which they will be presented. In this case, the independent variable has two levels: 15 minutes and 30 minutes. The order of presentation will be randomized.

The third part of the research is to collect data. This involves having participants perform the task under the different conditions and recording the number of errors made.

The fourth part of the research is to analyze the data. This involves using statistical tests to determine if there is a significant difference between the two conditions.

The final part of the research is to write the report. This involves summarizing the findings of the research and discussing their implications.
