

4.3.3 Institution has the following Facilities for e-content development and other resource development

1. Audio visual center, mixing equipment, editing facilities center and Media Studio	Yes
2. Lecture Capturing System(LCS)	Yes
3. Central Instrumentation Centre	Yes
4. Animal House	No
5. Museum	Yes
6. Business Lab	Yes
7. Research/statistical database	Yes
8. Mootcourt	No
9. Theatre	Yes
10. Art Gallery	Yes
11. Any other faculty to support research	Yes

1. Audio visual center, mixing equipment, editing facilities center and Media Studio

Audio-Visual Centre:

Audio Visual Recording facilities such as 4K Video Cameras, Tele Prompter, High Quality Lapel Microphones, Live Background Graphics, Presentation Screen, Preview Monitor, Talk Back Unit, , Playout Unit, News Room Capture System (NRCS), etc are established in the department of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Mixing equipments and software's for editing:

Switcher (SONY MVS3000s) which can take 14 inputs from different sources generate hundreds of virtual sets for recording of video lectures. The audio mixer has provision for 12 input channels which helps to produce talks, discussions, interviews and lectures. Professional Video editing softwares for visual and audio editing is installed in the visual editing laboratory.

Jnanavahini Media Center:

A state-of-the-art ‘Jnanavahini’ Media Centre has been established in the University’s Jnanashakti Campus. The Media Center is well-equipped for shooting and editing television and Radio programmes besides generating audio-video educational aids. There are two camcorders exclusively for shooting inside the studio and two cameras for outdoor shooting. The Media Center has video switcher which can take inputs from eight cameras and generate hundreds of virtual sets for presentation of news and discussion programmes. The audio mixer has provision for 16 input channels. The Media Center also has a voiceover room and a teleprompter.

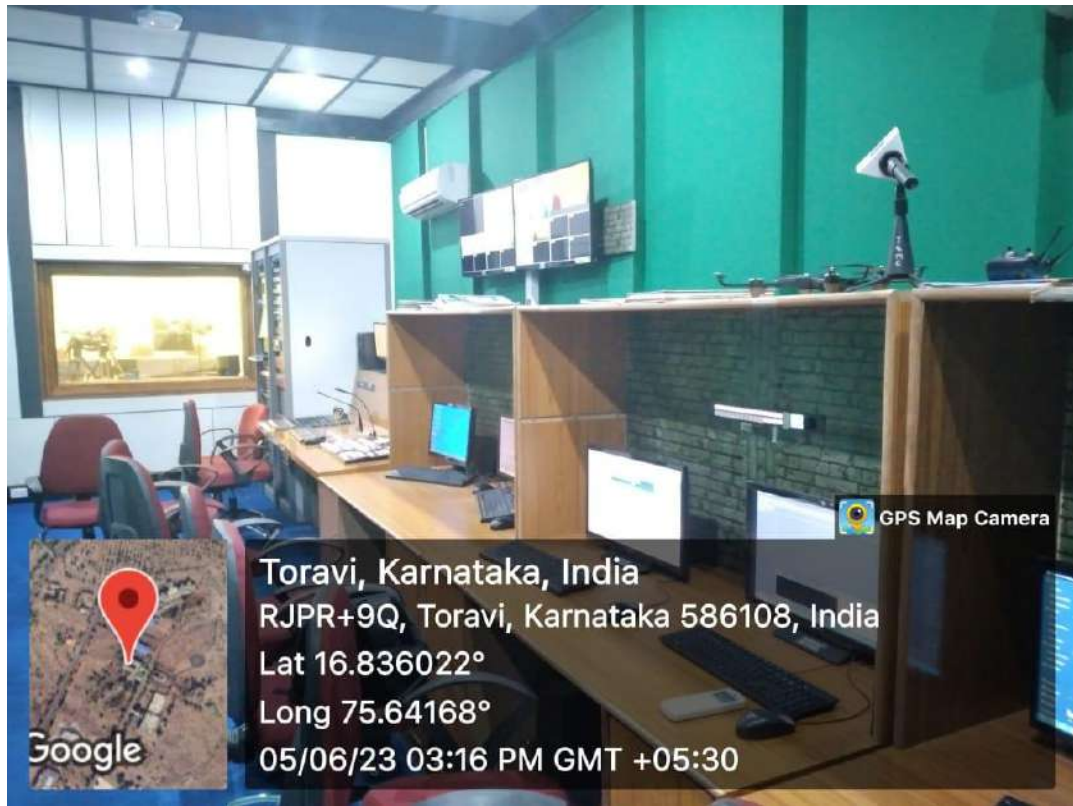

A large television studio, a post-production Control Room, film editing and remixing facilities, a radio studio and a large facility for audio-visual production based on still photography, it becomes a resource centre to be met with imagination and talent. The Media Center has been built adopting green technologies and will consume less power. Postgraduate students from the departments of journalism and Mass Communication would be trained at the facility. The facility will help the staff and students in modern communication technologies. This Media Center will be utilized for Tele-Education programmes of our University. We are planning to produce women success story documentaries from the rural areas as part of our awareness programmes. The ambience of the Media Center is competitive and challenging, anticipating and preparing the students for the years ahead as producers and media persons.

2. Lecture capturing system:

The Media Center has Professional Camcorders and High end Lavalier microphones for capturing the lectures. Using this studio the e contents can be recorded or stream directly to the digital platforms using broadcasting softwares such OBS. A wide cyclorama and green screen is also set up in the studio to create live graphics. 24 TB high speed storage unit is used for storage of recorded contents.

3. CENTRAL INSTRUMENTATION CENTRE

The central instrumentation centre, Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women university is equipped with the instruments like Gas chromatography-Mass spectrometry (GC-MS), Fourier Transmission- Infrared Spectroscopy (FT-IR), Ultra-violet spectrophotometer (UV) and High performance liquid chromatography (HPLC) made by Shimadzu, Gas chromatography (GC) and table top IR machine made by Agilent Technologies,

Sl. No	Name of the instrument	Maker	Usage	Remark
01	Gas chromatography-Mass spectrometry (GC-MS),	Shimadzu	It is used to record the Mass spectrum of chemical molecules, it is useful for the M.Sc., M.Phil., and Ph.D. students of departments like Chemistry, Pharmaceutical chemistry, Biotechnology, Botany, Zoology, Bioinformatics, Physics and Food processing and Nutrition.
02	Fourier Transmission-Infrared Spectroscopy (FT-IR)	Shimadzu	The FT-IR is specifically used to determine the functional group analysis in organic compounds but it is also by other fields of researchers like M.Sc., M.Phil., and Ph.D. students of Physics and biological science disciplines.	With Zinc Selenoid ATR
03	Ultra-violet spectrophotometer (UV)	Shimadzu	It is used to determine the UV absorption bands of molecules. Department of Pharmaceutical chemistry, Chemistry, Biotechnology, Botany, Zoology, Bioinformatics, Physics and Food processing and Nutrition make use of this instrument
04	High performance liquid chromatography (HPLC)	Shimadzu	HPLC is very much useful in isolation of mixture of compounds, natural products extracts and in purification of synthetic compounds. Both, Qualitative and Quantitative procedures are possible. Departments belonging to Chemical Sciences, Biological sciences are benefitted with this instrument.
05	Gas chromatography (GC)	Agilent Technologies	GC is best used for qualitative analysis of mixtures and natural products.extracts though there is an ample opportunity for quantitative isolation also but I mg quantities only.
06	IR	Agilent Technologies	This is for quick analysis of functional groups in molecules

5. Museum Details:

Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women's University Museum has a cultural and Educational Significance. This will be a traditional center of learning both the scholars and the common people. The Museum being a treasure house of traditional knowledge would be of great help in transmitting the knowledge from one generation to another generation. This will not be a center for exhibition of relics. This would be an important link that connects the present with the future. This would act as a catalytic agent that promotes change and development. This museum intends to bring the so far hidden tradition of women's knowledge and skill to lime time. It also intends to reveal the importance of women's traditional knowledge in the empowerment of women and to provide to it an all together new dimension.

The museum is a major project launched by the University to fulfill its objectives to work beyond its usual teaching and research work such as identifying, collecting, studying women's contribution to the society. The museum is not only a part of creative syllabus but also as a treasure house that preserves the letters and culture of Karnataka state related to women. The museum has collected more than 4250 museum materials from 30 districts of all over Karnataka. In our museum we have 4 large halls. The collected materials showcased in these halls for future aspects, the hall has been build.

For students, museum provides a unique and immersive learning environment. They offer hands-on experiences, interactive exhibits, and visual aids that engage students' senses and enhance their understanding of various subjects. Museums complement classroom teachings for students by providing real-life examples and practical applications of academic concepts. They help students connect theoretical knowledge to real-world scenarios.

49.	INDKAR M2 F 01462	Dodda Geru Putti (Large)	2	Bamboo and Cashew oil and powder It was called as Dobi Marker	H-10 C-51	70	This basket was used to keep food items for 2-3 days. Especially Holige, Hoorana, Rice and Saambar. Food grains were also stored in it. Cashew Oil mixed with Cashew Powder was smeared. It worked both for the durability of the basket and as a preservative. After eating the Cashew fruit the seed inside was collected. Seeds were filled in the pot specially made for it. Pot was closed with the lid with three holes. It was put upside down on another Pot kept on the stove. Oil in the seeds starts melting because of the heat. Melted oil trickles down to the empty Pot. After the oil gets cooled, it is mixed with the mashed, boiled seeds and applied to the baskets of different sizes. Later, once again it is smeared with oil to give it a smooth finish. BUSINESS LAB:

A business lab, also known as a business laboratory or innovation lab, is a controlled environment where our students and scholars can experiment, test, and develop new ideas, services, and strategies. The primary purpose of a business lab is to foster innovation, creativity, and problem-solving within a secure and supportive setting. Here are some common uses of a business lab:

- Ideation and Innovation: Business labs provide a space where our students and scholars can brainstorm and generate new ideas for products, services, or processes. The collaborative environment encourages creative thinking and the exploration of unconventional solutions.
- Market Research: Business labs allow students and scholars to conduct controlled market research experiments to gain insights into customer preferences, behavior, and needs. This information helps in making data-driven decisions and refining marketing strategies.
- Training and Development: Business labs provide a safe environment for students and scholars to learn and practice new skills, especially in areas like technology, customer service, and sales.
- Crisis Management and Risk Mitigation: Students and scholars can use business labs to simulate potential crises or risks, enabling them to understand the significance of preparedness and how to develop contingency plans.
- Collaboration and Team Building: Business labs facilitate teamwork and collaboration among students from different departments or even external partners, fostering a culture of cross-functional cooperation.
- Digital Transformation: In the context of digital transformation, business labs can be used to pilot new technologies and digital initiatives before implementing them across the entire organization.
- Start-up Incubation: We are planning for start-up incubators, providing resources, mentorship, and infrastructure to support the growth of early-stage ventures with the help of business lab function.
- Corporate Strategy Testing: Business labs also would be utilized to test and refine corporate strategies, such as expansion plans, new market entry, or diversification efforts, so as to make our students prepared and aware about these strategies.

Overall, business lab serve as a valuable space for the students and scholars to experiment and innovate, allowing students to stay competitive and adapt to the rapidly evolving business landscape.

9. Theatre

At present the university uses the front opening of the university (width 40ft- length 60ft) for theatre activities during youth festivals cultural programs, international women's day, several programs have been successfully organized few of the photographs are appeared with.

An open theatre has been constructed as part of the women museum (front side) which accommodates around 100 people for activities like skit, mime etc.

At the rear side of the museum, there is a well type construction basically meant for open play.

A convention centre named after Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, can accommodate around 1500 to 2000 people with a dais of width 45ft- length 85ft. The building is complete except for acoustics and internal furniture due to post covid financial issues. It will be ready by next academic year

10. Art gallery

Women play a unique role in the construction of a nation and knowledge. Their contribution is different from that of the contribution of men. Hence it is proposed to establish Art gallery in Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women University Vijayapura main campus to showcase the achievements of women of India in general and Karnataka in particular. The Art gallery mainly aims at recording women's knowledge and skill and at preserving them as models for the generations to come.

This art gallery has a cultural and educational significance. This will be a traditional centre of learning both for the scholars and the common people. The art gallery being a treasure house of traditional knowledge would be of great help in transmitting the knowledge from one generation to another generation. This will not be a centre for exhibition of relics. This would be an important link that connects the present with the future. This would act as a catalytic agent that promotes change and development. This art gallery intends to bring the so far hidden tradition of women's knowledge and skill to limelight. It also intends to reveal the importance of women's traditional knowledge in the empowerment of women and to provide to it an altogether new dimension.

The newly constructed Women museum building at Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women's University consists of 4 sections and the interior of these 4 sections has an area of 7260 square feet. This art gallery is the first of its kind in India, where women's culture, handicrafts and their contribution to all fields will be documented and exhibited through four sections and 40 galleries:

1) Tribal and nomadic communities:

Tribal of Karnataka: Art, crafts, folk forms, skills, knowledge with their costumes of the important tribes of Karnataka Siddis, Halakki gaudas, Hakki-pikki, Soligas, gauligas, Jenukurubas, Kadukurubas, Gondas, iruligas, Koragas, Kadu siddas, Harenshikaris, Kunchikoravas, Lambanis, Helvas, Advichenchas, Durgamurgis, Handekurubas, Hagalu veshagaras, Malekudiyas collected and will be displayed in this section.

- Videos of folk dance of different regions
- Recordings and videos' of folk singers like Sukri Bommana gouda, late daroji Eramma, Manjamma Joguti, sumitra Harijan
- Jewellery, costumes and embroideries of lamabani women
- Brooms, different types baskets, cradles, mats prepared by Kunchi korava, koragas etc will be exhibited.

2) Agriculture, livestock, Food and indigenous medicine:

In Karnataka main occupation is agriculture as it is in all over rural India, but dry land is more than irrigated land. The main crops are Ragi and very rare millets, jawar, paddy, rice, serials etc. are regular crops. In cash crops: coconut, arch nut, sugarcane, different oil seeds, coffee etc. are included. More than 75% women are agricultural workers. In globalization, most of the men migrated in the different cities, but it is resulted in feminization of poverty. Agriculture has been survived due to women and today in all over the country women are the food providers, but they are malnourished and deprived from nutritious food. They are facing a problem of depression as survivors behind their husbands who commit suicide. As it has a legacy of wonderful invention by women, which is alive today and women hold several innovative resources, and experimented in the process from thousand years.

For art gallery we are displaying:

- Agricultural tools
- Measuring instruments
- Types of lamp used in agriculture
- Rituals and songs related to agriculture
- Food, Live stocks, Indigenous Medicine

3) Performing arts, rituals, and worships:

Karnataka is very famous for the traditional folk theatre and folk music like yakshagana, krishanparijata, Sangya-balya, choudaki, gigipada, Sutrda bombeyata, Togalu bombeyata etc including its costumes, make up, jewelry, process of preparation etc and documentaries of the legendary women in that art form like kaujaligi Ningavva, Nanadi Champavva, Myagere Mallavva, Lokapura Yallavva, lakshmibai Salalli, Lalita Patrota

- Documenting the lives of famous singers Amirbai Karnataki, Gangubai Hanagal, Gohar Jaan,
- Documenting different folk dances like pugadi, damami, madira, naganalike, talamaddale, dudi, soma kunita, joguti kunita, -Gangavva-gauravva etc.
- Rituals performed during worshipping of female goddesses like kallurtti, guddapura Danavva, iqgi Bheemavva, jumadi, kinya mechu and alla mechu, dyamavva, maragavvam guttargi Bhagamma, Gullavva etc.

4) Women in Public Life:

Karnataka's saint Akka Mahadevi is the first saint among all women saints in India, who has courageously brought a philosophy like Bhagwan Mahaveer, that the body is mortal, but the humanity, peace and love are immortal. She was challenged by contemporary sharanaru, but she argued, proved her brilliance, she has shown that women are knowledgeable and creator of knowledge.

In this section of Art gallery we will be collecting, portraying the lives and works of Bhakti poets of 12th like Akka Mahadevi, Kadir Remmavve, Sule Sankavve; Important women writers of preindependence like Tirumalamba, will be documented. Their sketches, their line of poetry, and their original work (if available) papers, their belongings, epitaphs or sculptures or any artifacts related to their biography will be depicted in this section.... The first women in every field will be depicted.

In all the four sections the artefacts will be displayed on stone pedestals cocooned inside impact-resistant glass. Modern interactive technologies, such as touch screen kiosks, illuminated narrative boards, and digitally recorded audio, will guide visitors.

- Screens with a predefined video projection, which can include information like text, photos, images or short movies of the art gallery objects etc.

- High brightness touch screen, located outside or inside the art gallery, with multimedia presentation for personal use of individuals or for the use of small groups of visitors.
- It has a set of tools, not only for visualization, but also for querying by visitors/users, which would like to know more information about the artifacts or some parts of the site.

The proposed arrangement of the art gallery inquires the possibility of breaking the 'real' space into different spatial sub units, which will be related to its function (exhibits, public, information, other uses). A scenario is created about the type and level of multiple walk paths inside the art gallery. In order to solve the problem of the limited available space, a good use of its height is proposed: the visitor is smoothly led towards a suspended rising corridor, where the information either is provided by digital means or is mixed with the exhibits, thus creating space and virtual images which provide all necessary information for the better understanding of the site and its history. So the natural level with all the exhibits and the database of the art gallery with the digital technology tools and the virtual images produced by them acts separately.

Department of Biotechnology and Bioinformatics

Laboratory of Natural Compounds and Drug Discovery

Laboratory of Natural Compounds and Drug Discovery is been created under the VGST-KFIST L1 grant sanctioned by Department of Science and Technology, Govt. of Karnataka. The research laboratory is helping to carryout research by faculty members of Department of Biotechnology and Bioinformatics, Research scholars and PG and UG students of various Dept. of life sciences. Currently, broad area of research are anti-inflammatory assays, gene expression studies, Nano material synthesis and its applications. Presently two research funding are in progress and, 06 Ph.D students are pursuing research program.

Thalidomide-based inhibitor for TNF- α : designing and Insilico evaluation

Biradar Shivaleela, S. C. Srushti, S. J. Shreedevi and R. L. Babu*

Abstract

Background: Inflammatory diseases are the vast array of disorders caused by inflammation. During most inflammatory events, many cytokines expressions were modulated, and one such cytokine is tumor necrosis factor- α (TNF- α). TNF- α is mainly secreted by monocytes and macrophages. Notably, it has been proposed as a therapeutic target for several diseases. The anti-TNF biology approach is mainly based on monoclonal antibodies. The fusion protein and biosimilars are prevalent in treating inflammation for decades. Only a few small molecule inhibitors are available to inhibit the expression of TNF- α , and one such promising drug was thalidomide. Therefore, the study was carried out to design thalidomide-based small molecule inhibitors for TNF- α . The main objective of our study is to design thalidomide analogs to inhibit TNF- α using the insilico approach.

Results: Several thalidomide analogs were designed using chemsketch. After filtration of compounds through Lipinski rule of 5 by Molinspiration tool, as a result, five compounds were selected. All these compounds were subjected to molecular docking, and the study showed that all five compounds had good binding energy. However, based on ADMET predictions, two compounds (S3 and S5) were eliminated.

Conclusions: Our preliminary results suggest that S1, S2, S4 compounds showed potential ligand binding capacity with TNF- α and, interestingly, with limited or no toxicity. Our preliminary investigation and obtained results have fashioned more interest for further in vitro studies.

Background

Inflammation is a response to tissue injury or infection. It is characterized in its acute phase by increasing vascular permeability by plasma extravasation, resulting in an accumulation of fluid, leucocytes, and mediators to the inflammatory site [1, 2]. Inflammatory diseases are the vast array of disorders and conditions caused by inflammation, including allergy, asthma, autoimmune diseases, coeliac disease, glomerulonephritis, hepatitis, inflammatory bowel disease, reperfusion injury, and transplant rejection, etc. [3]. During most of these events, many cytokines expressions were modulated, and one such cytokine is tumor necrosis factor alpha (TNF- α). TNF- α is among one of the pleiotropic cytokines, mainly secreted by monocytes and macrophages, TNF- α has been shown to play a pivotal role in orchestrating the cytokine cascade in many inflammatory diseases, and it is known to be "master-regulator" of inflammatory cytokine production. Notably, it has been proposed as a therapeutic target for several diseases [4]. TNF- α is a multidimensional cytokine protein that modulates various cellular functions, including survival, proliferation, and cell death [5]. The anti-TNF biology approach is mainly based on monoclonal antibodies (mAbs); the fusion protein and biosimilars are prevalent in treating inflammation for a decade. Small molecule inhibitors are likely to be cheaper to produce than mAbs or Ig-Fc-based fusion proteins [6]. Currently, few small molecule inhibitors have come to light. However, not even a single small

Abstract: Inflammation is a vital response to an injury or infection. During inflammation, many cytokines are over-expressed to regulate the inflammation, and it is found that Tumor necrosis factor- α (TNF- α) is one of them. To inhibit TNF- α pro-inflammatory cytokine, the present study focuses on some major spices with anti-inflammatory properties. The major spices such as turmeric, cinnamon, cayenne pepper, ginger, and garlic were selected, and the study's phytochemicals were retrieved from the Pubchem database. TNF- α 's 3D structure was fetched from the PDB and validated the structure by SAVES. PDBsum was used to predict active sites of a target protein, and docking parameters were studied by Autodock. Further, the ADMET properties of the selected spices were predicted. In silico screening and evaluation study reveals that Bisdemethoxycurcumin and Zerinbone were found to show significant inhibitory effects on TNF- α . Importantly, no toxicity was found for the compounds. The study also analyzed the Protein-I and structure stability by molecular dynamic simulations, and structure stability was found within the range. These molecules are considered potent inhibitors of TNF- α , and further validation in vitro and in vivo may explore the herbal based therapeutic modality for managing inflammatory diseases.

1. Introduction

Inflammation is a vital response originated by bacterial infection, chemical injury, and environmental pollution, which ends in cell injury or cell death and releases inflammatory mediators such as TNF- α [1], IL-1 [2], IL-6 [3], COX-1, COX-2 [4], 5-LOX [5], PDE4 [6] etc. These inflammatory mediators are reported in several inflammatory diseases like asthma, psoriasis, inflammatory bowel disease, rheumatoid arthritis, and systemic sclerosis [7]. Many cytokines are over-expressed during inflammation to regulate the inflammation process. One such critical pro-inflammatory cytokine is tumor necrosis factor-alpha (TNF- α). TNF- α is produced by monocytes and macrophages in response to various injuries or infections. TNF- α has been found to be a significant therapeutic target for a variety of diseases, particularly inflammatory diseases [8]. We aim to identify small molecules which can inhibit TNF- α and thereby reduce the manifestation of inflammation. Various anti-TNF- α therapeutic modalities were available such as infliximab, adalimumab, golimumab, etanercept, and certolizumab.

Withania somnifera: The Wonder Plant with Withanolide E and J Inhibit Inflammatory Mediator AP-1 FactorSrushti S C¹, Shivaleela Biradar¹, Rajappa J J² and Babu R L^{1*}¹Laboratory of Natural Compounds and Drug Discovery, Department of Bioinformatics and Biotechnology, Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women's University, Vijayapura-586108, Karnataka, India; ²ICAR- Central Tobacco Research Institute, Research Station, Hunsur-571105, Karnataka, India

Abstract: Background: Inflammation is a natural biological response of the body tissues to harmful stimuli, such as damaged cells, irritants or pathogens, and it is a protective response involving blood vessels, immune cells and molecular mediators. Activator Protein-1 (AP-1) is a dimer composed of both homo and hetero dimers with jun and fos subfamilies. The heterodimer c-fos-c-jun complex is upregulated in several inflammatory diseases such as asthma, rheumatoid arthritis, psoriasis etc. Since ancient times, several plants have been used as anti-inflammatory sources. Withania somnifera is a vital plant having well-documented anti-inflammatory properties. In this study, the phytochemicals of Withania somnifera are used to study the inhibitory effect on the inflammatory mediator AP-1 factor.

Objective: Determining the inhibitory effect of Withania somnifera phytochemicals against AP-1 factor (c-fos-c-jun complex).

Methods: In the present study, the phytochemicals of Withania somnifera were retrieved from the IMPPAT database. All the retrieved molecules were employed to screen in-silico pharmacological properties using in-silico tools such as SwissADME and ProTox II. Further, molecular interactions of receptors and ligands were carried out by the Autodock 4.1 tool.

Results: A total of 90 phytochemicals of Withania somnifera were subjected to the IMPPAT database. Among those, 21 phytochemicals showed the appropriate drug similarity characteristics. The Autodock 4.1 tool was used to analyse the binding effect of these 21 phytochemicals. Withanolide E and Withanolide J molecules showed excellent inhibitory action compared to others. The interaction pattern showed that SER and ARG amino acids participate in the formation of drug hydrogen bonds.

Conclusion: Among the 90 phytochemicals of Withania somnifera, only two molecules showed potential ligand binding ability. Further, in-vitro studies may validate the findings.

1. INTRODUCTION

Inflammation is a part of the body's natural biological reactions to injured cells, irritants, or infections, as well as to blood vessels, immune cells, and molecular mediators [1]. Inflammation is an integral component and is a protective response against various stimuli [2]. Clearing necrotic cells and tissue damaged by the original insult, inflammation and tissue healing processes are major roles of inflammation in order to remove the primary source of cell damage. Many transcription factors are regulated up and down, and eventually, they are responsible for the cause of inflammation. One of such transcription factors is Activator Protein-1 (AP-1), which plays an important role in inflammation. It comprises dimers of family members of Jun (c-Jun, Jun-B and Jun-D) and Fos (c-Fos, Fos-B, Fra-1 and Fra-2). Fos proteins can only be dimmed with the Jun family, whereas Jun family members can be dimmed with Jun or hetero with Fos. The most important functions of AP-1 transcription factors are documented in the event of cell proliferation, survival, death, differentiation, transformation or cell migration and numerous cellular processes [3]. In addition, it also plays a vital role in asthma, psoriasis, transplantation and rheumatoid arthritis [4], as well as in inflammatory disorders. Thus, AP-

Abstract: Cancer is a multi-step process involving alterations in epigenetic and genetic processes. Oral squamous cell carcinoma is a frequent oral malignancy that originates from the transformation of normal cells into malignant cells as a consequence of failures in a series of normal molecular and cellular processes. The mechanism of human carcinogenesis is often seen as a double-edged sword, with the body's system being thought to counteract the detrimental consequences of neoplastic cell proliferation while simultaneously promoting tumor development. Various transcription factors play a significant part in cancer regulation, with the activator protein-1 family of transcription factors (TFs) being the most prominent regulatory protein family. The Jun, Fos, ATF, and MAF protein families are all present in the AP-1 dimeric complex. While certain AP-1 proteins, including JunB and c-Fos, are known to be majorly oncogenic in function, experimental studies have shown that other AP-1 proteins, such as JunB and c-Fos, also play a critical role in tumor suppression. The aim of this review is to offer breakthrough information on the role of molecular mechanisms mediated by AP-1 TFs in tumor development and its environment.

1. INTRODUCTION

1.1. Oral Cancer: Symptoms, Diagnosis and Treatment

Oral squamous cell carcinomas account for 2-3% of all new malignancies diagnosed in the United States, making it the tenth most common type of cancer. However, the average five-year survival rate of 50% has not changed significantly over the last few decades [1]. Oral cancer is the world's eighth most prevalent cancer [2]. The frequency of oral cancer varies greatly across the country, with over two-thirds of patients residing in developing nations, such as Southeast Asia, Eastern Europe, and Latin America [3]. The gingival-buccal complex (alveolar ridge, gingival-buccal sulcus, buccal mucosa) is the most prevalent sub-site for oral cavity cancer in India, as opposed to cancer of the tongue, which is more common in the Western world [4]. Oral cancer has one of the highest frequencies in India (age-standardized rate of 9.8 per 10,000), making it the most prevalent cancer among males (men/women ratio being 2:1) and accounting for around 30% of all new cases each year [5].

A recent assessment of cancer mortality in India states carcinoma of the oral cavity as the top cause of death. In men, it accounts for 22.9% of all cancer-related fatalities [6]. There is an increasing prevalence and delayed presentation of oral cancer (about 60% of patients are diagnosed at stage III or IV) [7].

The data from India's national cancer registry states that the incidence of cancer rises with age. Women, on the other hand, have a lower incidence than men. This can be attributed to gender variations in lifestyle and behavioral patterns [8].

In the United States, the age range of 55-64 years has the greatest prevalence of oral cancer. In contrast, many patients in high-incidence nations, such as India, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka, are over 40 years old [9]. Because risk factors, such as cigarette smoking, are more prevalent in lower socioeconomic strata of society, the incidence of mouth cancer is greater. Despite advancements in diagnostic and therapeutic procedures, age-standardized mortality rates (5.2 per 100,000) in India have remained steady [10]. Overall, the 5-year survival rate for all stages of oral cancer is 60%. These rates are higher for localized tumors (82.8%) than for tumors with regional (51.8%) or distant metastases (27.8%) [2].

Abstract

Plant genomics is the study of a whole plant genome's architecture, functions, organization, genetic compositions, networks, and interactions. Internally, bioinformatics, system biology, metagenomics, proteomics, transgenomics, metabolomics, genomic selection, phenomics, contemporary instrumentation, epigenomics, and robotic sciences are all intertwined. In the country of cheap and completely sequenced over a hundred plant genomes, it has achieved tremendous progress in high-throughput sequencing over the last three decades. Because of the utilization of modification methods and unique genomic selection, these advances have a wide range of consequences in plant biology and breeding, while also introducing a host of new challenges and responsibilities. This article informs readers on plant genomics review, laws, transfer, ethics, public views, and a wide range of databases.

Cell signaling and apoptosis in animals

M. Naveen Kumar¹, Shivaleela Biradar² and R.L. Babu²

¹Department of Biotechnology and Genetics, M.S. Ramaiah College of Arts, Science and Commerce, Bengaluru, Karnataka, India. ²Department of Bioinformatics and Biotechnology, Karnataka State Akkamahadevi Women's University, Jnanashakti Campus, Vijayapura, Karnataka, India

13.1 Introduction

Cell signaling and apoptosis are very important aspects in the operation of cellular system. Cell-cell communication is due to chemical signaling for the purpose of development, tissue repair, and immunity, as well as normal tissue homeostasis. If there is any defect in interaction of cell signaling, it leads to diseases such as autoimmunity, diabetes, and cancer (Vlahopoulos et al., 2015; Wang et al., 2013). Apoptosis is programmed cell death, which occurs in multicellular organisms and happens when cells deliberately decide to die for the maintenance of cell population in tissues in some pathological conditions and during the development of organisms (Leist and Jaattela, 2001).

13.2 Cell signaling in animals

During 1855, Claude Bernard invented the concept of cellular signaling. He explained that some internal secretions of ductless glands release into the bloodstream and hold an effect on distant cells. In a similar concept, in 1880, Charles Darwin and his son Francis Darwin demonstrated the phototropism of coleoptiles in plants. They described certain influence is transferring from tip to more basal areas of shoot for inducing the curvature and regulating the growth of a plant (Bennett, 1998). Later, this messenger or transmittable factor was coined as auxin. While in the case of animals, the receptor was discovered by John Langley and his student Thomas Elliott (Langley, 1901) while studying the sympathetic neuro-effector transmission. In early 1905, Ernest Starling termed the word "hormone" to describe the chemical messengers that travel from cell to cell along with bloodstream and it may coordinate the activities and growth of various organs in the body (Starling, 1914). During the 1950s the downstream intracellular events started unfolding based on the discoveries of chemical messengers and receptors.

Cells are the basic structural, functional, and biological elements of any organism. All cells are communicating with each other by defined manner, which we call as cell signaling or signal transaction. The signals involve chemical signals from other cells or from an extracellular fluid environment, and these cells will also receive signals from environments, such as the digestive and respiratory system. The signal transduction involved five sequential steps: first, signaling molecule that contains the chemical signal; second, signal receptor-receiver of signals; third, signal conveyer (secondary messenger); fourth, signal transducer that amplifies the signal; fifth, signal that generates a change in the function of cells (Starling, 1914).

13.3 Classification of cell signaling in animal cells

In multicellular organisms, most of the signals are chemical in nature, which are hormones, neurotransmitters and components of extracellular matrix. The effect of these molecules is exerted locally, or they may transmit over long distances. The cell signaling classification is mainly based on the distance traveled by the signal within the organism. The classified signals are Autocrine, Paracrine, Endocrine, and Signaling by direct contact.

13.3.1 Autocrine

Autocrine is a type of cell signaling, and it secretes autocrine agents to bind its autocrine receptors. The autocrine agents maybe hormones or chemical messengers that bind to the receptor of the same cell to make changes in the cell; autocrine signals plays a pivotal role in the development of the cell and in the immune response (Pandit, 2007) (Fig. 13.1).

Identification of Clinical Variants Present in Skin Melanoma Using Exome Sequencing Data

Shivaleela Biradar, K. M. Kiran Kumar, M. Naveen Kumar, and R. L. Babu

Abstract Melanoma is one of the most vigorous and life threatening kind of skin cancer, accounting for millions of death per year. Understanding the process of normal cells transforming to melanoma cells has become a current necessity. The prime objective of the study is to classify the mutated genes that have a role in transforming normal skin epithelial cells into a melanoma cell and predicting their clinical relevance and health care perspective. In order to achieve the objective, we have conducted a comprehensive genome analysis using whole exome sequencing data, precisely focusing on mutations or gene alterations at distinct stages of melanoma. The high number of mutations was predicted at the metastatic stage on conducting whole exome sequence data analysis, wherein study showed that among 61 genes involved in melanoma process, majority of genes are part of NF-KB and WNT signaling pathway, thereby hints the involvement of these two pathways in melanoma disease progression. The identified genes are OR52E2, OR5111, OR52A5, OR5AS1, OR52E6, OR10P1, OR5M1, OR10A7, OR9Q2, OR52I1, RASA1, and PIK3CA. Further, Invitro analysis of these genes may prove the possibility of melanoma biomarkers.

LABORATORY OF PLANT TISSUE CULTURE

The Laboratory of Plant Tissue Cultures has been created under the RUSA grant sanctioned by Ministry of Human Resource Development, Department of Higher Education, Govt. of India. The laboratory mainly focuses on research on in vitro cultures of plants with a specialization in the breeding, plant propagation and in vitro conservation of plant genetic resources. Our main research objectives are optimization of micropropagation technology (meristem cultures, the formation of adventitious shoots, organogenesis and somatic embryogenesis), the induction of haploidy and polyploidy, the in vitro conservation of plant genetic resources and the study of somaclonal variability of in vitro regenerates. Research in the laboratory is carried out by the PG and Research students and Faculty members of Botany, Biotechnology and Bioinformatics. The laboratory is equipped with autoclave, a hot air oven, laminar airflow, culture room and incubator, tissue culture rack and light room.

Disparities of phytochemical constituents and antioxidant activities of some Indigofera species

ABSTRACT

The current study was intended to examine the difference in the phytochemical and antioxidant profile of nine Indigofera species. With this aim, the species were assessed for total phenolic content, flavonoid content, and antioxidant activity using ferric reducing antioxidant power (FRAP), DPPH free radical scavenging, ferrous ion chelating activity, phosphomolybdenum reducing power, deoxyribose degradation, β -carotene bleaching, nitric oxide scavenging, and superoxide radical scavenging assays. The content of total phenolics and flavonoids ranged from 1.33 to 22.5 mg TAE/g plant material and 0.47 to 5.05 mg QE/g plant material respectively in the various species, while the antioxidant activity as tested with different antioxidant test models varied with the species studied as well as with the solvents used for the extraction. Interestingly, all the tested extracts demonstrated considerable free radical scavenging activity, moreover, I. tinctoria, I. glandulosa, I. linnaei, I. hochstetteri, I. zizanioides, and I. tinctoria were found to be the most effective among the species studied. The results indicated the significant differences in phytochemical constituents and the antioxidant activity among the species. The Pearson correlation coefficient analysis exhibited a significant correlation of phenolics and flavonoids with the antioxidant activity.

Introduction

The genus Indigofera is a large genus comprising some 800 species in the family Fabaceae. The species are confined to the tropical and subtropical regions of the world. In India, the genus is characterized by about 60 species and 11 varieties, of which 16 species and 7 varieties are endemic (Chauhan et al., 2013). Indigofera species possess a wide range of uses ranging from several ecological and economic purposes, feed for livestock or ornamental, medicinal plant recipes, as well as a dye for commercial purpose and, are also used in the treatment of several diseases. Numerous studies have been conducted to unveil the pharmacological activities of the different species of the genus Indigofera (Nisar et al., 2009; Rajashekar et al., 2013; Rahman et al., 2018; Vijayan et al., 2018; Karakousi et al., 2020). The systematic literature collection, about this investigation, confirmed that the intake of plant product containing antioxidant compounds could reduce the risk of being attacked by several diseases (Xie et al., 2015). In recent years, increasing interest has been paid to phytochemicals, because of their multiple bioactive activities including antioxidant activity (Abraham et al., 2018). Furthermore, it is well known that antioxidant activity and phytochemical composition of plant extracts depends on plant species, phenological stage, biotic pressures, genetic composition, geographical locations, and/or different changes in environmental conditions (Alfaro et al., 2013). In this study, we might relate disparities in the phytochemical compounds and antioxidant profile of different Indigofera species. In this sense, the current investigation deals with quantitative analysis of total phenolic content, flavonoid content, and antioxidant activities of different solvent extracts of the Indigofera species.

ABSTRACT

Pomegranate (Punica granatum L.) is a widely used fruit, which contains several interesting bioactive compounds and possess health-promoting properties. Seeing the importance of this fruit, it is crucial to study its quality characteristics. Hence, in the current study, we assessed phenolic content, flavonoid content and antioxidant activity of different plant parts (leaves, rind and arils) of two pomegranate cultivars (Kesar and Ganesh). The analysis of phytochemical constituents in the cultivars revealed that, the content of phenolics ranged from 49.3 to 600 mg TAE/g plant material and the content of flavonoids ranged from 0.17 to 76.4 mg RE/g plant material. The maximum amount of phenolics and flavonoids was observed in the rind extracts as compared to the leaves and arils in both the cultivars. On the other hand, the antioxidant activity determined by different antioxidant models exhibited various degrees of antioxidant activity in different plant parts of the cultivars and was found to be highest in rind and aril extracts than that of leaves. Among the solvents methanol and ethanol gave highest extraction yields as compared to water and acetone. Total phenolics and flavonoids were significantly different with methanol and ethanol being the most efficient solvent and acetone being the least efficient one. Correlation between the antioxidant activity and phenolics and flavonoid content was found to be significant. Thus the results strongly indicated that there were significant differences between pomegranate cultivars. Generally the cultivar Ganesh has higher antioxidant activity as well as total phenolics and flavonoid content in comparison to Kesar.

Introduction

Pomegranate, “the fruit of paradise” is an ancient fruit, belongs to the family Punicaceae. In the world, the production and consumption of pomegranate have been increased because it is used in various fields. Indeed, besides its use as fresh, it is used for making refreshing drinks, aromas, jams and other preparations (cakes, wines, etc.) (Awaram et al., 2000). It contains a good amount of minerals like phosphorus, calcium, potassium and iron (Wasila et al., 2013). It is one of the major commercial crops grown in India. In Karnataka, this crop has spread across different districts viz., Vijayapura, Bellary, Bagalkot, Koppal, Chitradurga, Belgaum, Davangere, Tumkur, Bangalore, and Gulbarga. The most popular varieties suitable for processing and table-use are Ganesh, Mridula, Arakta, Bhagwa (Kesar), G-137 and Khandar. Among the different varieties grown in Karnataka, variety Kesar is most popular for large-sized fruit, deep red rind, and fleshy testa with slight bitter juice and consumer acceptance and variety Ganesh is popular because of prolific yield, medium-sized fruits, soft seeds, pinkish flesh and sweet juice (Shiva Prasad et al., 2012). Over the past decade, significant progress has been made in establishing the pharmacological mechanisms of pomegranate and the individual constituents responsible for them. Extracts of all parts of the fruit appear to have therapeutic properties. (Lansky and Newman, 2007) and some studies report the bark, roots, and leaves of the tree have medicinal benefit as well (Naqvi et al., 1991). Many researchers have focused their interests and investigation on this wonderful shrub for the purpose of finding miraculous compounds for human health (Akhtar et al., 2019). The major functional properties include antioxidant, antibacterial, anticancer, antitumor, antiplatelet aggregation, antimutagenic, estrogenic property and many more (Viuda-Martos et al., 2010). ABSTRACT

The current study was designed to assess five species of the genus Phaseolus for phenolic content, flavonoid content, and antioxidant ability. The antioxidant capacity of the sample extracts was assessed using different antioxidant models such as ferric reducing antioxidant power (FRAP), DPPH free radical scavenging, phosphomolybdenum reducing power, ferrous ion chelating activity, hydrogen peroxide radical scavenging, hydroxyl radical scavenging, deoxyribose degradation, and β -carotene bleaching assays. The results obtained discovered that the concentration of phenolics and flavonoids in the studied species ranged from 1.11 to 4.01mg TAE/g plant material and 0.11 to 1.06 mg CGE/g plant material. The antioxidant activity of the extracts varied in a wide range in the different antioxidant assays depending on the genotype as well as the polarity of the solvents used to obtain the extracts. Ethanolic and aqueous extracts exhibited the maximum amount of phenolics and flavonoids among the solvents. The species studied exhibited a significant range of phenolics, flavonoids, and antioxidant capacity. Hence, the present investigation can provide a new direction by utilizing Phaseolus species to formulate cost-effective, eco-friendly, and value-added therapeutic products.

1. Introduction

Phaseolus (Fabaceae) is one of the most important genera encompassing herbaceous to woody annuals and perennial vines comprising about 70 species all indigenous to the Americas, mainly Mexico America. The species are a rich source of carbohydrates and proteins and a significant source of vitamin B complexes such as riboflavin, thiamine, niacin, and folic acid. It also provides zinc, copper, iron, phosphorous, calcium, potassium, and magnesium additionally has a high fiber content (Rocha-Guzman and Gallegos-Infante, 2007). It is also an imperative source of polyphenols such as flavonoids, isoflavones, lignans, and tannins. These compounds offer a protective role in humans owing to their strong tendency to scavenge free radicals (Cimera et al., 2013; Benúhle et al., 2018).

The seeds of Phaseolus species were expended by humans worldwide as a dynamic source of proteins and fiber (Onyiah and Islam, 2000). The consumption of seeds has previously been associated with a reduced risk of cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, and even certain types of cancer (Durrin, 2012; Hayer et al., 2014). Some researchers reported that legume seeds are medicinally important due to their antioxidant, anticancer, antimicrobial, antiobesity, cardioprotective, hepatoprotective, and antiproliferative activities (Zhu et al., 2012; Guajardo-Piñero et al., 2021; Zou and Cheng 2014). Several articles have appeared in the literature focused on the antioxidant potential of common beans (Amanovic et al., 2008; Akrod et al., 2011). Some studies evaluated the seeds of the most economically important species, P. vulgaris, for the presence of seed coat anthocyanin glycosides (Choung et al., 2011) and polyphenols (Epimova-Alonso et al., 2006). The findings of Suárez-Martínez et al. (2018) reported P. vulgaris as a nutraceutical source for human health with favorable effects against cancer because of the antimutagenic and antiproliferative properties of their phenolic compounds, lectins, and protease inhibitors. The accessible literature revealed that P.

The present study was conducted to assess phytochemical and antibacterial activity of various crude extracts viz. pet-ether, chloroform, methanol and aqueous extracts of Salvia aegyptiaca against bacteria and fungi such as Staphylococcus aureus (MTCC Code - 9886), Pseudomonas aeruginosa (MTCC Code - 6438), Aspergillus niger (MTCC Code - 872), Aspergillus flavus (MTCC Code - 8790) by adapting agar well diffusion method. The highest percentage of extraction yield was observed in aqueous extract followed by methanol, chloroform and petether extracts. The phytochemical test revealed that the presence of proteins, carbohydrates, lipids, alkaloids, phenols, flavonoids, steroids, glycosides, tannins, terpenoids and resins. The crude extracts of Salvia aegyptiaca have displayed significant to moderate and dose dependent (25, 50 and 100mg/ml) antibacterial and antifungal activity. The antibacterial activity of methanol extract shows maximum inhibition zone on Gram positive bacteria Staphylococcus aureus compared to Gram negative bacteria Pseudomonas aeruginosa at 100mg/ml concentration. Similarly, the antifungal activity of aqueous extract shows maximum inhibition zone on Aspergillus flavus compared to Aspergillus niger at 100mg/ml concentration. Overall, fungi were more sensitive than the bacterial strains in Salvia aegyptiaca.

Introduction

Medicinal plants are rich source of metabolites that are potential sources of drugs and essential oils. Clinical microbiologists have great interest in screening of medicinal plants for antimicrobial activities and phytochemicals as potential new therapeutics. The antimicrobial properties of plants have been investigated by a number of researchers worldwide though biological evaluation of plants extracts is vital to ensure their efficacy and safety. These factors are of importance if plant extracts are to be accepted as valid medical agents for the treatment of infectious diseases (Tanaka et al., 2006) especially in light of the emergence of drug-resistant microorganisms. Despite the medicinal potential of plants being considerable in our country, knowledge and studies on wild growing Salvia species from this area are scarce; accounts for their therapeutic effects were found especially in other sources (Bagci and Koçaka, 2007; Tepe et al., 2007).

Salvia aegyptiaca L. (Egyptian sage) is belongs to Lamiaceae family. It is a green dwarf shrub that grows in various locations in

ABSTRACT

Objective: To evaluate the antioxidant and antibacterial efficiency of alkaloids of root, leaf, and fruit of Cucumis trigonus.

Methods: The antioxidant and antibacterial properties of alkaloid extracts were assessed by ferric thiocyanate (FTC), 1, 1-diphenyl-2-picrylhydrazyl (DPPH) radical scavenging assay, hydrogen peroxide radical scavenging assay, superoxide radical scavenging activity and ferric reducing power were analyzed separately for its inhibition percentage at different concentration (20 μ g, 30 μ g, 40 μ g and 50 μ g/ml) and antibacterial activity by agar disc diffusion and minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) against Staphylococcus aureus (MTCC Code-9386), Pseudomonas aeruginosa (MTCC Code-6458).

Results: The highest percentage of extraction yield was observed in fruit followed by leaf and root. The maximum content of alkaloid was found in fruit and root compared to leaf. The scavenging efficiencies of the extracts increased with the increasing concentrations. Appreciable levels of total antioxidant activity by FTC (2.112 \pm 0.011%), DPPH radical scavenging activity (1.912 \pm 0.001%), superoxide radical scavenging activity (0.955 \pm 0.021%) and hydrogen peroxide radical scavenging activity (0.914 \pm 0.007 %) were observed at 50 μ g/ml of fruit extract. However, ferric reducing power was more in the root (0.893 \pm 0.0070%) compared to fruit (0.791 \pm 0.023%) and leaf (0.520 \pm 0.00 %) at 50 μ g/ml. The alkaloid extracts of root and fruit exhibited more antibacterial activity against Staphylococcus aureus (16.51 \pm 0.05 and 19.68 \pm 0.03 mm) and Pseudomonas aeruginosa (12.2 \pm 0.03 and 14.2 \pm 0.06) at 100 μ g/ml than leaf. The minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) of the root, leaf, and fruit was in the range of 3.125 μ g/ml to 35 μ g/ml for the pathogenic bacteria.

Conclusion: Data from the present results revealed that the alkaloid extracts of fruit and root of C. trigonus show good antioxidant and antibacterial potential than leaf. Hence, may be explored for the formation of new antibacterial with antioxidant drugs.

INTRODUCTION

Natural antioxidants are known to exhibit a wide range of biological effects including antimicrobial, hepatoprotective, anti-inflammatory, anti-allergic, anti-thrombotic, anti-carcinogenicity, anti-osteoporosis, and anti-aging activity. The benefit of using natural drugs is their easy availability, economic and no-side-effects [1]. So, the compounds from natural sources such as phenol, flavonoids, alkaloids etc are capable of protecting against ROS mediated damage may help for the prevention and treatment for various complex diseases. Therefore traditional medicine is an important source of potentially useful new compounds for the development of chemotherapeutic agents.

Cucumis trigonus Roxb, a perennial tendrillar herb of the family Cucurbitaceae commonly called as bitter guard in English, jungal (ndriyan in Hindi, mekke kai in Kannad, indravaram voshala in sandesh and kothammatra in Tamil). It is native to India and is distributed throughout India and also found in Ceylon, Afghanistan, Persia and Northern Australia [2]. In the traditional system of medicine C. trigonus root, fruit and seeds have great medicinal values [3]. The roots of the plant are used as purgative and liver toxic. The fruits are used in the treatment of leprosy, fever, jaundice, diabetes, cough, bronchitis, anaemia, constipation, other abdominal disorders and anaemia [4]. Further, fruit pulp is bitter, astringent, thermogenic, antihelminthic, liver toxic, carminic, appetite, expectorant and intellect promoting [2]. Unsaturated lipids are the major constituents of seeds and acts as a coolant and astringent. The plant is reported to possess proteolytic and serine protease activity [5]. The aqueous fruit extract of C. trigonus had beneficial effects in reducing the elevated blood glucose level and lipid profile of STZ-induced diabetic rats [6] and also therapeutic and prophylactic value in the treatment of myocardial infarction [7]. The alcoholic fruit extract of C. trigonus could afford highly significant protection against CCl₄ induced hepatocellular injury [8]. It is a wild vegetable plant with nutritional value is similar to that of cucumber [9]. Due to its wide application in traditional medicine evident from the available literature that the search for natural drugs of plant origin with antibacterial and antioxidant studies has become a central focus of research. Thus, the present study was carried out to provide the scientific evidence by examining the antibacterial and antioxidant activity of alkaloid extract from root, leaf and fruit of C. trigonus plant using in vitro assays.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

Collection of plant materials

Cucumis trigonus ROXB (Cucurbitaceae) root, leaf, and fruit were collected in the month of November and December farm field of Vijayapur district, Karnataka, India. The plant was identified with the help of 'The Flora of the Presidency of Bombay' [10]. The voucher specimen No. 504 has been deposited in the department of Botany, Government college Kalburgi district, Karnataka, India. The plant parts such as root, leaf and fruit were dried in the shade at room temperature between 25-30°C for 15-30 d, after drying the plant were chopped and grinded made into fine powder.

Alkaloid extraction

Alkaloids were extracted from different parts of the selected plant by the well-established method of Ramawat et al., [11]. Finely 100g powdered sample of plant parts were extracted in 20 ml methanol after shaking of 15 min. After filtration, filtrates kept for drying then residual mass were treated with 1% H₂SO₄ (5 ml 2 times). Extraction was then done in 10 ml of chloroform (CHCl₃) by using separating funnel. Organic layer of chloroform was rejected and aqueous layer was basified with 30% NH₄OH (pH 9-10). Now again, extraction was done in 10 ml of chloroform and organic layer of chloroform (lower layer) was collected in a flask and repetition of ABSTRACT: Cajanus cajan (L.) Millsp belonging to the family Fabaceae commonly known as pigeonpea or arhar. The present study conducted to assess the phytochemical and pharmacognostic in terms of organoleptic, fluorescence analysis and physicochemical parameters of seed coat and cotyledon of C. cajan. Differential extraction yielded of seed coat extracts of petroleum ether, chloroform, ethanol and aqueous shows 6.3%, 1.14%, 11.36% and 9.32% and cotyledon extracts of petroleum ether, chloroform, ethanol and aqueous shows 7.34 %, 4.25%, 10.45 % and 8.45 % respectively. Physicochemical parameters such as total ash, acid insoluble ash and water soluble ash of seed coat and cotyledon were found to be 14.5% and 11.5%, 8.35% and 7.36%, 2.11% and 3.39% respectively. Further the mineral elements like zinc, magnesium and copper content were found more in seed coat whereas, maximum content of iron were observed in cotyledon. The fluorescent analyses of powdered drug play an important role in the determination of quality and purity of the drug. Phytochemical analysis revealed the presence of glycosides, tannins, flavonoids, phenols, lignins, alkaloids, steroids and glycosides in seed coat and cotyledon. The maximum content of phenols, flavonoids, tannins, lignins, alkaloids, steroids were found in seed coat compared to cotyledon, whereas glycosides content was more in cotyledon. The pharmacognostic study revealed the purity of the sample and helps to differentiate the plant sample from the adulterants.

INTRODUCTION: The dietary plants are also considered to be medicinally which are going to reduce the risk of several chronic diseases. In recent years a lot of research has been done in the development of chemopreventive agents derived from foods that constitute integral parts of the human diets¹.

Legumes, which play a crucial role in many diets worldwide are thought to be related with beneficial health implications in chronic diseases such as certain cancer types (colon, breast, prostate)² and diabetes³. Except from their known high nutritive value, significant quantities of phytochemical compounds are identified in legumes and considered to be responsible for their beneficial effects⁴. Cajanus cajan (L.) Mill sp (In english: red gram, hindi: tur or arhar, kannad: togari, sanskrit: adhaki) is a perennial member of the family Fabaceae. Abstract
 This project is aimed at preparation of herbal soaps from Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.), Azadirachta indica (A. Juss), Aloe barbadensis Mill., Curcuma longa L. To reduce the skin diseases, compared the prepared herbal soaps with synthetically manufactured soaps.

Keywords
 Herbal soap, Soap base, Extraction.

Introduction
 Herbal soaps are organic products made from natural herbs and ingredients that are beneficially, healthier for skin. The main resources used here for the preparation of herbal soaps is plant leaves of different plants such as Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.), Azadirachta indica (A. Juss), Aloe barbadensis Mill., Curcuma longa L. The leaves extraction used for herbal soaps can be blended with soap base on the bases of quantity of soaps to be prepared.

Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.)
 It is commonly known as ಶಿವಶಿಶು, it is a climbing herb. Leaves are heart shaped, green in colored, fruits are cherry and reddish in color. It having many medicinal and ayurvedic uses.

Azadirachta indica (A.Juss)
 It is commonly known as ಶೇವೆ it is having broad leaved evergreen that can grow up to 30m tall and 2.5m in girth. The leaves are medium to large in size and arranged to oblong shape, fruit is drupe. It having antioxidant, antimicrobial and anti-inflammatory properties.

Curcuma longa L.
 It is commonly known as ಕರಿಬೆ it is a perennial, rhizomatous, herbaceous plant. The rhizome that lie just below the soil surface. Older rhizomes are somewhat scaly and brown in color, while young rhizomes are pale yellow to brown orange.

Aloe barbadensis Mill.
 It is commonly known as ಅಲೋವೆರಾ grows as a succulent with a basal rosette in clumps or spreading via stolons. Leaves may produce yellow milky latex.

Methodology
 The herbal soaps prepared from Azadirachta indica (A.Juss), Aloe barbadensis Mill., Curcuma longa L., Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.). The leaves are crushed with the help of mortar and pestle. The obtained extract is added with the required amount of base with temperature 30°C to 50°C. Then the prepared mixture is transferred to the mold.

Result
 Now a days every one using chemical based products our intention is to control disease against the skin by using plant materials. Neem leaves containing the nimbic, ascorbic acid and nimbolide these are responsible for antioxidant, antifungal, antimicrobial and anti-inflammatory activity. Tinospora cordifolia(Willd.) containing alkaloids, steroids, glycosides sesquiterpenoids and polysaccharides. Tinospora cordifolia(Willd.) as an important role in traditional ayurvedic medicine, it is used for treatment of skin diseases like itchy skin, cracking, swelling, dry skin etc. Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.) having more medicinal and ayurvedic importance compared to Azadirachta indica (A.Juss), turmeric, aloe vera etc. Therefore we prepared soap by using Tinospora cordifolia (Willd.). But there is no research have been conducted on Tinospora cordifolia(Willd.) still.

Future scope
 • The preparation of soaps from plant leaves and large scale can be beneficial economically.
 • Play an important role in reducing skin diseases.

Acknowledgement
 We are thankful to BRIDC Vijayapura centre and Ashok P.R.(Project Assistant) for training us in herbal soaps preparation.
